Milan / IT, March 19, 2024 – Kuehne+Nagel has signed a multi-year agreement with Laboratoires Expanscience, a French pharmaceutical and dermo-cosmetics laboratory, owner of the skincare brand Mustela. Since 1950 Mustela has been providing skincare products of natural origin from newborns to grown-ups.

Kuehne+Nagel will manage storage, picking and distribution of cosmetics, which are characterised by a wide product range and small packaging sizes. In Northern Italy Siziano (PV), Kuehne+Nagel operates a distribution centre that is optimised to cater for the requirements of the cosmetics and healthcare industry, offering single part picking, quality control in incoming and outgoing goods, labelling, packaging, and repacking.

Operating from its facility, Kuehne+Nagel will oversee domestic distribution for Mustela’s retail outlets, drug stores, pharmacies, and baby stores. Leveraging its own Warehouse Management System, Kuehne+Nagel aims to optimize performance and effectively address Mustela’s logistics challenges, including seasonal fluctuations, trends, and product shelf life.

“We are very proud to partner with Kuehne+Nagel for the storage and distribution of our products, as we share the same dedication in providing qualified products while trying to reduce our impact on the planet as much as possible. Our goal is to continue improving and making a positive impact on the environment and people,” said Roberta Bonacina, General Manager of Laboratoires Expanscience Italy.

“We are delighted to have been chosen by such a renowned customer as Mustela, that confirms our qualified industry-specific capability for the healthcare and cosmetics sector,” said Ruggero Poli, National Manager of Kuehne+Nagel Italy.
